Cape Cod Culinary Incubator and KAM Appliances Announce New Collaboration

Barnstable, MA (November 2018) – Cape Cod Culinary Incubator (CCCI) and KAM Appliances are pleased to announce a new collaboration where the public will be invited to a series of classes, workshops and food related events at the KAM Appliances showroom in Hyannis.

Cape Cod Culinary Incubator is a non-profit corporation focused on economic development via education, community, and providing shared-use commercial kitchen facilities for Cape Cod Food Industry entrepreneurs. KAM Appliances has a number of live kitchens in their Hyannis showroom AND have a desire to serve the local community.

By coming together, the two organizations can accomplish the objectives of both and provide a number of valuable and interesting offerings to the community.

In announcing the new working relationship, Harry Henry CCCI's Board President indicated "We are excited for the opportunity to bring Cape Cod's food makers a way to show their products to the public. KAM's facilities are top notch and will provide a great venue for the events we are designing."

Dave Murray, KAM Appliances General Manager said "It is important for KAM Appliances to be a part of the community where we live and work and combining efforts with an organization like Cape Cod Culinary Incubator where food is the common denominator is a win-win for all."

The first workshop in the series is being developed for December 5th – more details forthcoming.

The Commercial Kitchen Coop of Cape Cod, Inc. , doing business as the Cape Cod Culinary Incubator, was founded in 2013 as a non-profit corporation to pursue a mission of economic development via education, community, and providing shared-use commercial kitchen facilities for Cape Cod Food Industry entrepreneurs. Our vision is to empower culinary entrepreneurship across Cape Cod.

KAM Appliances is your local appliance partner, family owned and operated for over 40 years. KAM has showrooms and live kitchens in Hyannis, Hanover, and Nantucket. KAM is competitively priced and carries, delivers, installs, and services all major and luxury brands.
